

UK Research Culture and Environment & Promotion of DEI/EDI

英国の研究文化・研究環境と
DEI/EDIの推進

Professor Lynn Ang
University College London (UCL)
Institute of Education

Monday, July 22, 2024

15:00-16:00

Style: Online (Zoom)

*Face-to-face participation is also welcomed at B101 on Kawauchi Campus, Tohoku University

Content:

Research demonstrates that diversity, equality and inclusion (DEI/EDI) are integral to delivering research excellence and a world-leading research and innovation system. In the UK, it is recognised that nurturing and supportive research culture is considered a critical driver in delivering research excellence. However, institutional barriers and challenges remain in creating more inclusive and equitable research cultures and environments. In this talk, Professor Lynn Ang will introduce the UK research landscape and the institutional priorities of UCL and the Institute of Education (IOE) Faculty to promote DEI/EDI and a healthy working environment for the research community.

Register here!

Professor Lynn Ang is Professor of Early Childhood Education, Pro-Director and Vice-Dean Research and Development at UCL Institute of Education. Professor Ang has a long standing career of over 20 years as a senior academic. Professor Ang is deeply committed to creating an inclusive and supportive research culture and environment in higher education to support the career development of staff and students especially early and mid-career researchers. Professor Ang is also an internationally recognised distinguished social scientist in Education as Fellow of the Academy of Social Sciences.

Contact: Kojima, Global Learning Center, Tohoku University